About the Programme

The Master of Arts in International Law and the Settlement of Disputes (on-site, hybrid, and online formats) is a graduate programme that offers students an understanding of the role that international law and institutions play in the settlement of international and transnational disputes. This specialization examines the role of national and international courts and tribunals in contributing to the settlement of disputes. As international and transnational adjudication has acquired a more prominent role in international relations, it is essential to understand how these global and regional courts are responding to the challenges of the early 21st Century. Students will examine the role of international law in the settlement of disputes in a wide array of fields such as human rights, armed conflicts, territorial and maritime border issues, environment and climate change, multilateral trade, investments, amongst others. Students will learn not only the traditional legal processes employed in international and transnational adjudication but also the alternative forms of dispute settlement prevalent in international law. Students will also attend skills development sessions that are designed to support their professional career and employability.

This master's degree offered by the University for Peace and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research combines the best of academic and executive-style education. Students will also gain first-hand experience of the work of the United Nations (UN) as they will have the opportunity to participate in a field trip to Geneva or The Hague where the UN maintains a significant presence.

■ Who is it for?

The programme is designed for graduate students, diplomats, government officers, NGO representatives, international civil servants or private law practitioners looking to to strengthen their knowledge in international law, dispute settlement, international affairs management and diplomacy.

Invest in Your Future

This unique programme, backed by the United Nations, is designed to provide students with first-hand experience in the area of International Law and the Settlement of Disputes.

LEARN FROM HIGHLY EXPERIENCED EXPERTS
